RE: Fiscal Year 2005-2006 Overtime Expenditures and Employee Counts

The following report reports fiscal year 2005-06 overtime expenditures and actual employee along with historical data dating back to fiscal year 1991-92.

The 2005-06 fiscal year ended with overtime expenditures of $63.7 million compared to $70.07 million for fiscal 2004-05. This represents a citywide decrease of $6.39 million (9.12%) over the prior year. The General Fund overtime expenditures dropped from $39.3 million in 2004-05 to $38.2 million in 2005-06, a reduction of $1.1 million (2.8%).

The $63.7 million in overtime exceeded the citywide budget of $40.2 million by $23.5 million, or 58.59%. The General Fund overtime budget of $24.6 million was overspent by $13.53 million, or by 54.9%.

The 2005-06 year-end citywide employee count was 13,588, which was a decrease of 1,604 (10.5%) filled positions compared to the 2004-05 year-end total of 15,192.

The Administration has made a concerted effort in the last 2 fiscal years to reduce the amount of overtime costs.

When using the figures from 1991-92 as a baseline, since that year was the lowest usage of overtime in the last 15 years and comparing it with 2005-06, real growth in total overtime dollars has not taken place for the first time in many years (Chart 1). However the average amount of overtime earned per employee increased by 30%, which is alarming.

Negotiated wage increases since 1991-1992, with compounding, have totaled 22% for general and 36% for uniform employees. Using the higher 36% for all employees, if there was no growth in overtime costs other than recognizing wage increases over these 15 years it would now total $62.7 million annually, which is $1 million lower than the 2005-06 actual.

However the amount of overtime spent should have dropped since there are many positions that now carry upgraded titles that have eliminated the ability to earn overtime for employees with those new titles.

Additionally the number of employees has dropped by 3,963 (23%) from 1992 to 2006, which normally would lower the amount of overtime used. Historically, increased overtime costs have been a result of an increase in employees. The DOWOP days cannot be used as an excuse either because non-union staff were the only employees affected in 2006, and most do not qualify for overtime. The union employees only began DOWOPs in 2006-07, which will increase overtime costs in the current year, similar to 1992-1994.

General Observations on Overtime

Employee compensation, salary, pension and benefits are the largest single expenditure category in the budget. One element of employee compensation is overtime. Expenditures for overtime are one of the elements that require constant attention from management. Any change in overtime expenditures, either year to year, or over a longer period of time should be investigated to ensure that the situation doesn't warrant an operational change. Overtime is also an area where management has a high level of flexibility and ability to control. This is not always true with other elements of employee compensation.

The use of overtime is required to address a number of different situations including, emergencies, special events, catch up on a backlog of work, projects and to provide services in light of vacancies. In some cases the nature of the job may require overtime. Some types of overtime can be anticipated and other types are very difficult to control or estimate the cost of.

An example of overtime that is part of the nature of the job would be public protection, police, fire and EMS technicians. A portion of the overtime expenditures for these positions results from being "on a run" or scene at the end of the assigned shift. In most cases, it is not possible or practical to replace these individuals because their shift is over. This is one type of overtime that usually will increase as the number of employees in these positions increases, just because increasing the number of employees increases the times this situation will occur.

When consistent overtime is used over a substantial length of time, with the same employees being worked, there are issues that management should be considerate of, such as; the effect longer hours may be having on the employees. After what point does the productivity of the employee become affected? Is any additional work actually being completed? Or has the amount of work been adjusted to fit the longer period of time being allowed to complete the assignment?

Overtime usage can provide management with an indication that adjustments in operations may be necessary. But caution is also called for to ensure necessary and beneficial overtime expenditures are not prohibited.
